Mini-Projects

What are Mini-Projects?

Mini-Projects are part of how you take control of your learning in this class! Picking ideas from the approved list (found in the tab "Mini-Projects" within the various units on DrHartnell.com), you get to demonstrate the connections you have made with the content material in creative and unique ways. Artwork, music, poetry, and videos are just a few of the ways history can be tailored around your interests and passion!

You will need to complete ONE Mini-Project for 25 points.

This Mini-Project can be made using computers, on-line platforms, or with traditional means (markers, posters, etc.). If the project is an actual item that you create, take a picture of your project and e-mail it to me. Be sure to label all Mini-Project submissions as "Mini-Project" so they do not get confused (or graded) as a Big Project.

You MUST pick different Mini-Projects for each unit. In other words, you may not do the same project for all six units.

In the event you lose points on a Mini-Project, you may make the necessary changes and resubmit up until the due date (which is why I strongly encourage you to submit assignments early).

Text Messages

Description: Select a major political, cultural, athletic, educational, societal, religious, entertainment, or historical event from Colonial America (1607-1775), the American Revolution (1775-1783), Antebellum America (1783-1861), the Civil War (1861-1865) or Reconstruction (1865-1877) and create a string of fictional text messages between more famous people.

Requirements: Select 2 (or more) actual people from the time period covered by the unit. What might they say to each other (if texting existed back then)? The conversation needs to be more than just "Hey" and typical greeting nonsense. The discussion should reference actual events from the time period. The responses or opinions of those texting should be in line with what they might have actually been. In other words, don't have an anti-war person spouting off pro-war sentiments. The texts can be humorous, so long as they aren't offensive. You can organize it in a typical back-and-forth fashion, but be sure to indicate who is saying what. If you wish to make it look like actual texts, that is permitted. If done on Word/Google Docs, these exchanges should be typed with 12-point/Times New Roman font. They do not need to be double-spaced. No profanity, sexual innuendos, or offensive slang/jargon will be tolerated in these texts; using such may result in disciplinary steps being taken.

Be sure to read the description and the requirements for each Mini-Project idea.

Be creative! Take risks and push yourself to think "outside the box" on these Mini-Projects!

How do I submit Mini-Projects?

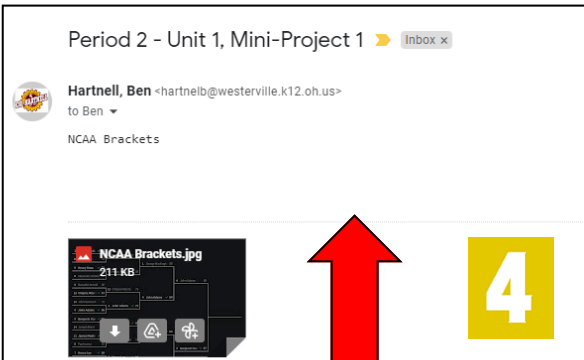

Properly submitting Mini-Projects is very important. These steps MUST be followed or the assignment will be returned!

When you share Google Docs or Google Slides, follow the prompts and use your period, unit, and the assignment category (Mini-Project, Big Project, Movie Review, etc.) as the new name.

After selecting my name, be sure to type the specific project choice in the message box (NCAA Brackets, Children's Book, Collage, etc.). Do not make me guess what you are sharing!

If you e-mail, use the same details in the subject (period, unit, category). Type the project choice as the text of the e-mail. Remember the attachment!
