Canto #23: 9:00am, April 9th –
Eighth Circle, Bolgia 6:
The Hypocrites

Outrunning the demons, the Poets slide down the slope to Bolgia 6, just ahead of their pursuers. Dante observes a line of weeping sinners, clothed in golden cloaks lined with lead. These sinners are the Hypocrites who “fraudulently” said one thing (but did another). Dante notices the shade of Joseph Caiaphas, crucified and transfixed by three stakes to the floor so that every sinner here must tread on him. (Caiaphas was the Jewish priest that put Jesus on trial.)

Canto #24: 11:00am, April 9th –
Eighth Circle, Bolgia 7:
The Thieves

The Poets move down into the pit of Bolgia 7. Here serpents are coiled about the sinners (Thieves), binding their hands behind them and knotting themselves through their loins. A serpent flies at a sinner and pierces the jugular vein, causing the sinner to burst into flames, collapse into ashes, and then reform. Just as thieves take away property (and “fraudulently” possess stuff that isn’t theirs), so they themselves undergo disintegration throughout eternity.

Eighth Circle – Bolgia 7	The Thieves	Thou Shall Not Steal.	Serpents bind hands and knot themselves through loins. If jugular vein is bitten, sinner bursts into flames, then reforms.

One of the Thieves makes an obscene gesture and swears at God. Hearing this, the serpents attack him. Some thieves have additional punishments depending upon the severity of their stealing in life. Some of them first appear to be humans... other reptiles. Then through a painful transformation, they change forms with each other. This is because in life they took other peoples' stuff and made it into their own.

Cantos #26 & #27: 12:00pm, April
9th - Eighth Circle, Bolgia 8:
The Deceivers / False Counselors

In Bolgia 8, the Deceivers/False Counselors are punished. These sinners used their eloquence to “fraudulently” mislead others. They are wrapped in tongues of fire, which conceal them just as in life their speech concealed their thought.

Canto #28: 1:00pm, April 9th –
Eighth Circle, Bolgia 9:
The Sowers of Discord

In Bolgia 9, the sinners are divided into 3 categories: Sowers of Religious Discord, Political Discord, and Discord Among Kinsmen. For “fraudulently” misleading people, they walk in a circle. At one point in their journey, a demon armed with a sword cuts them from their chin to their groin. By the time they reach him again, their wounds are healed... and hacked anew. Two of the Sowers of Religious Discord include Islam’s prophet Muhammad and his son-in-law Ali.

Canto #29: 2:00pm, April 9th –
Eighth Circle, Bolgia 10:
The Falsifiers

Bolgia 10 is filled with Falsifiers. The ones described fall into 4 categories: Falsifiers of Metals (Alchemists), of Persons (Impersonators), of Coins (Counterfeiters) and of Words (Liars). The Alchemists suffer from leprosy that changes their appearance, just as they themselves “fraudulently” change the appearance of things in the world.

Canto #30: 3:00pm, April 9th –
Still in Eighth Circle, Bolgia 10

This canto deals with the 3 remaining categories of Falsifiers: Impersonators, Counterfeiters, and Liars. Unlike all other sinners in Hell, the Falsifiers are tortured from within themselves rather than from the outside. Just as the Alchemists in the previous canto were afflicted with leprosy, so the Impersonators are made insane, the Counterfeiters given dehydration, and the Liars tormented with a fever that makes them smell terrible.

Canto #31: 4:00pm, April 9th –
The Cliff between Eighth & Ninth
Circles: The Giants

Crossing from the Eighth Circle to the central pit (a well at the bottom of which lies Cocytus, the Ninth Circle), the Poets find the Giants. They challenged the Greek gods in a battle and lost. They pose a severe threat because they combine evil will with physical power, so they are chained inside a stone well. The giant Antaeus, who did not battle the Greek gods, lowers the Poets down to the floor of Hell.
